The National Catholic Safeguarding Standards requires Church entities to implement a system to assess the safeguarding credentials and manage the movement of all seminarians, clergy, religious and laity moving between different seminaries, formation programs and church jurisdictions. This declaration and the personal declaration of the applicant verify that the individual coming to exercise public ministry in a new jurisdiction is currently in good standing and records the movement and activities of these individuals.

'Good standing' means:

- there is not currently any complaint of abuse against an individual.
- there have never been any substantiated complaints of abuse against an individual.
- there are no known circumstances that could lead to a complaint of abuse against an individual and
- an individual is not otherwise deemed to be an unacceptable risk to children, young people, or adults at risk.
